Environmental charities facing loss of income at the same time as misconceptions about the positive environmental impact of lockdown are circulating widely
THE SUNDAY TIMES RICH LIST AND GIVING LIST 2020

The 2020 Rich List shows a £54 billion wealth cut between the 2020 pre-Covid and post-Covid list of Britain's wealthiest people and families – roughly 7% of their wealth. This is the first time since 2009 that the combined wealth has not risen.

The 2020 Giving List also shows donations are down overall. However, the report authors observe the challenges of gathering accurate giving data in the current situation. Total donations from those on the list fell to £3.16 billion, versus £3.75 billion in 2019, but the report also includes a special section focusing on Covid-related donations. Topping the Covid giving list is Alisher Usmanov at £117.7 million.

CAF, which partners the Sunday Times for the Giving List, notes that donor behaviour has changed through the crisis, with many stepping forward asking how they can help, rather than seeking to select individual charities.

The Rich List and Giving List are behind a pay-wall but can be accessed here:

CALL TO HELP EXTEND THE SOCIAL INVESTMENT TAX RELIEF SCHEME

The Social Investment Tax Relief (SITR), which is designed to support the growth of social enterprises and charities through private investment, may be retired by April 2021 due to a sunset clause in the legislation.

Resonance Impact Investment is calling for individuals to write to their MPs to ask them to support an amendment which would extend Social Investment Tax Relief's end date from April 2021 to April 2023.

If you require more information on SITR please get in touch with Daniel Brewer and the Resonance team sitr@resonance.ltd.uk.

EUROPEAN PHILANTHROPY AND SOCIAL INVESTING IMPACT HUB LAUNCHED

European philanthropy and social investment networks Donors and Foundations Networks in Europe (DAFNE), European Foundation Centre (EFC), European Venture Philanthropy Association (EVPA), Global Steering Group for Impact Investment (GSG) and Network of European Foundations (NEF) have come together to support the ‘survival’ (6 months) and ‘revival’ (18 month) phases related to the Covid-19 crisis.

The platform, called Unitus, will act as a collaborative online space to provide guidance and support to suppliers of funding, catalyse and coordinate activities, identify gaps, inspire initiatives, and accelerate supply and match demand.

The hub will have a focus on trans-national and cross-border activities and they invite all European actors in philanthropy and social investing, as well as global actors active in Europe to join the collaborative space.

INTERNATIONAL FUNDING FOR WHO AND GLOBAL GIVING

The World Health Organization’s COVID-19 Solidarity Response Fund has raised $214 million from 375,000 donors so far. Allocations from fund will be decided by WHO in line with its Strategic Preparedness and Response Plan, and will include UNICEF, vaccine development alliance CEPI (Coalition for Epidemic Preparedness Innovations), and other partners.

Under this plan it is estimated at least $675 million is needed for critical response efforts in countries most in need of help.

https://covid19responsefund.org/en/

Meanwhile, Global Giving’s Coronavirus Relief Fund has raised in excess of £5 million of its £8 million target. Donations will help to:
- Send doctors, nurses, and other front line responders to communities in need
- Get masks, ventilators, and other lifesaving medical supplies to hospitals and clinics
- Deliver essential items to struggling families and older individuals in quarantined cities and refugee camps
- Feed children that rely on school meals as their only source of nutrition
- Support hygiene awareness efforts

COVID-ACTION.NET LAUNCHES TECHNOLOGY DEBATE

The Covid Action Network has been launched to build a crowd-powered resource to generate ideas, develop insight and initiate meaningful action in the fight against Covid-19 and its consequences.

Network members can share news, views and ideas, participate in productive debates and provide input to the challenges that teams are facing in the field.

Covid-Action.net is currently leading a debate on society’s level of trust in technology, which has become a key feature of the pandemic response, both to combat the spread of the virus and to support social distancing.

Questions being considered include:
- Privacy versus health: can contact-tracing apps lead to freedom?
- A digital global workforce: the 21st century dream or the driver of new inequalities?
- Knowledge and misinformation: how can online platforms counteract the infodemic of fake news?
- E-parliaments: can government by zoom revitalise the democratic process?

To share information please contact Jack George: jack@ covid-action.net or go to www.covid-action.net
Almost all environmental charities are reporting the negative consequences of the pandemic, challenging the misconception that the lockdown has had a positive effect on the environment. Notable impacts have been the inability of charities to carry out conservation work and the reduced ability to carry out scientific, policy and advocacy work.

Challenges are also being experienced in the international context where the reduction in tourism and economic hardship is causing a spike in poaching and wildlife consumption.

At the same time, environmental charities are facing a loss of income (in line with other non-profits) with many reluctant to ask for support because of concerns that it will seem inappropriate at a time of increased humanitarian need. This is particularly acute for charities who rely on income from nature reserves, visitor centres and events.

These were the findings from a meeting of 40+ environmental fundraisers recently convened by the Environmental Funders Network. To support the UK’s environmental sector going forward, EFN will:

- Regularly convene funders to share intelligence and encourage collaboration
- Encourage new funds to support the sector
- Support fundraisers in environmental charities to share information, collaborate and access funds
- Enhance communications for the wider sector

The principal goals for this effort are to:

1) Help a robust environmental sector to emerge after the pandemic: determining which parts of the sector/organisations are most at risk, and helping to secure funding.
2) Support the sector to ‘build back better’: ensuring that the economic reset following the pandemic is as sustainable and fair as it can be.

THEMATIC SPOTLIGHT: WOMEN AND GIRLS

Lockdown procedures around the world have led to an increased focus on the issue of domestic violence. However, according to the OECD the economic and social consequences will exacerbate existing inequalities and discrimination against women and girls, especially among the most marginalised and vulnerable.

The European Women’s Lobby further notes that the situation is particularly worrying for women and girls made vulnerable by the crisis including sole carers, those in unsafe accommodation, those in precarious work or economic uncertainty, those requiring care or those who already face social exclusion.

In turn, this had led to increased calls for collaborative intelligence gathering to determine on-the-ground needs, as well as increased funding to enable organisations to adapt their service delivery to support vulnerable women and girls.

Fondation CHANEL has convened other key European donors in an Alliance for Women in Europe. The aim is to bring a structured response to the COVID-19 emergency as well as building capacity for long term support for women’s organisations in Europe. The initiative includes:

- A pooled fund offering flexible operational grants that provides a single point of access to donors and organisations;
- A dialogue and advocacy platform to share research and best practices, where experienced and new donors can convene with experts in their country and field of expertise through referrals.

Please contact the team for a follow up call:
Marion Schaefer, Head of European Programs (marion.schaefer@chanel.com)
Magali Nougarède, Executive Assistant (magali.nougarede@chanel.com)
Meanwhile, in the UK Rosa, the fund for women and girls, has conducted a women’s sector survey in partnership with the Women's Resource Centre, Smallwood Trust and Women’s Fund for Scotland, which had over 318 respondents.

Here are some of the top line findings from the survey:

- Over 50% wanted to see a national campaign for protection of the sector.
- Over 42% worked with BAME women.
- 66% are worried on some level about surviving this crisis.
- Over 50% said there was lack of time/capacity in finding suitable funds, and 40% said they had little capacity to write bids to reach emergency funds.
- Organisations are asking funders to give them as much flexibility as possible. 74% said they needed projects and programme proposals to be adaptable, and 55% said they needed to divert funds to core funding.

http://rosauk.org/2020/05/11/coronavirus-funding-resources-and-updates-from/rosa/

Internationally, the picture is different. According to new data from the International Rescue Committee, reports of abuse have decreased by 50% in Bangladesh and 30% in Tanzania as a result of restrictions on mobility, lack of information, and increased isolation. Once restrictions are lifted, UN Women expects a significant increase in the demand for services for those who have suffered gender based violence through the lockdown periods.

Among other activities, organisations have been supporting telephone support lines and looking for safe ways to maintain data on gender based violence throughout the crisis.

Following the Big Night In, Children in Need is coordinating a sector wide response for children and young people affected by COVID-19.

As part of this work, they are setting up both pooled and aligned funds under a shared strategy to enable philanthropists and foundations to contribute collaboratively to the effort.

Based on a survey of its 3,000 portfolio grantees, CiN has identified the following needs:

1. Increase in poverty and deprivation
   Pre-Covid 19 there were 4.1 million children in poverty overall (30% of children). In some parts of the UK more than half of children are living in poverty. Nearly a million people applied for universal credit benefits over a fortnight in March 2020 as the coronavirus pandemic worsened.

2. Worsening mental health and emotional wellbeing among those at risk
   83% of young people (with mental health needs) said the pandemic had made their mental health problem “worse” while 26% who had been accessing support said they were not currently able to do so. There has also been a sharp rise in the number of calls to ChildLine.

3. https://www.bbc.co.uk/news/uk-politics-52129128
3. Lack of access to essentials for disabled children and their families
   Nearly nine in 10 [89%] families said the health and wellbeing of their disabled or seriously ill children had been negatively affected as a result of the Covid-19 outbreak. Almost three quarters of families [73%] have gone without some essential household goods as a result of the Covid-19 outbreak.

4. Increasing incidence of domestic abuse and lack of services and support
   67% of survivors who are currently experiencing abuse said it has got worse since Covid-19 and 72% said their abuser had more control over their life. 80% of survivors, who previously had been supported through face-to-face informal networks, said this had stopped completely or decreased.

5. Anxiety about bereavement and anticipated need for more grief counselling
   BBC CiN projects are witnessing increased anxiety levels amongst children who have already experienced loss or have a seriously ill family member. Some projects are already supporting children bereaved due to a C-19 related death. There is an anticipation of a significant rise in demand as the number of deaths increases.
   How children cope with, understand and manage grief will be impacted, as the usual ways people grieve and say goodbye will change.

In response, CiN is leading a consultation that will include government, third sector organisations and funders (including trusts and foundations, philanthropists and corporate funders).

The aim is to develop a strategic vision for how funders can collaborate to address critical needs of children and young people across the relief, recovery and resilience phases of the COVID-19 crisis.
The consultation will consider the roles different funders can play to address the following challenges and opportunities:

- Connecting to those seldom reached and marginalised: identifying gaps in provision and how to address these.
- Connectivity and collaboration: there have been fast paced connections and collaborations between funders with potential for further development.
- Data and resource sharing across the sector: infrastructure organisations are already starting to share expertise and tools for free.
- Innovation: there is the opportunity to innovate and respond, e.g. systemic approaches
- Mobilisation to digital delivery: support and the resources to do this effectively are needed.
- A spotlight on inequality: highlighting the challenges for the most vulnerable in society and the importance of community support

The aim is to use the period of social change brought about by COVID-19 to explore how new forms of partnership can meet the needs of children and young people more effectively both during and after the pandemic.

LONDON COMMUNITY RESPONSE FUND – WAVE 2

The London Community Response Fund (LCRF) has awarded £11 million to community and voluntary organisations. The total funds pledged stands at £18 million. LCRF has moved from its Wave 1 programme of small emergency grants to Wave 2. Wave 2 has two funding streams:

- Crisis response – grants of up to £10,000 to enable you to meet the immediate needs of communities, from food and essentials, to equipment and additional short-term staff costs;
- Delivering differently – grants of between £10,000 and £50,000 to enable you to change the way you deliver your work to ensure it continues to meet the needs of your communities, from switching to digital channels to redeploying staff to boost your capacity at a time of increased demand. In some circumstances we may consider grants above £50,000 but there must be a strong rationale in your application for this.

There will also be a Wave 3 dedicated to sector sustainability.

LCRF fund was launched by London Funders, with backing from City Bridge Trust and the Mayor of London, to provide coordinated funding to support groups responding to the needs of London communities affected by the CV19 pandemic.

There is an open-access portal for community organisations to apply for funding.

Pooling their information means the grant assessors can determine if organisations have already passed due diligence screening by any aligned funder, enabling swift processing of applications.

The London Community Response Fund is currently hosting expert groups covering the following themes:

1. Advice
2. Arts and culture
3. Children and young people
4. Domestic abuse and violence against women and girls
5. Equity and inclusion
6. Food
7. Homelessness
8. Infrastructure (civil society support)
9. People at risk
10. Refugees and migrants

360GIVING PLATFORM

360Giving Covid Tracker registered a total of £50 million on 21st May. The data captures funding from 42 funders and 2,744 recipients.

When submitting data to the platform, funders can tag their donations with the label “COVID-19” to allow 36 Giving to track the total.

Additionally, 360Giving has updated its data visualisation to support collaboration through the pandemic. The tools allow funders to see which recipients they share with other funders.

MAANCH PLATFORM AND FUND

Maanch has created the first global COVID-19 dashboard, giving visibility of projects and transparency for funders to be able to respond rapidly and effectively during the crisis.

Using the intelligence gathered via the platform, Maanch has also launched a global philanthropic response fund to award grants globally and locally.

The fund also offers a layer of due diligence and impact reporting on the projects funded by the funded. This service is available to other existing funds for free.

BREVIO BRINGS FORWARD LAUNCH

Brevio has launched its online matching platform three months early to support efforts to match charities and funders efficiently.

The platform offers a standardised grant application process providing an efficient single point of contact for charities to access a wider pool of funding. Funders can input their criteria to achieve a suitable match. The platform will be free to funders until January 2021 and free to charities until May 2021.

CALL FOR ‘GOVERNMENT INNOVATION FUND’ FOR CHARITIES

Speaking at a virtual launch event for New Philanthropy Capital’s report State of the Sector 2020, Javed Khan, chief executive of Barnardos, said charities were “behind the curve” in terms of digital innovation and called on the government to invest in helping the sector to innovate. This will be vital for building the sector back up to be better than before the crisis.

Khan said the government should launch an innovation fund to help charities develop and share new approaches to providing services.

The Minister for Civil Society, Baroness Diana Barran, also spoke at the launch and outlined the priorities for her department as 1) building communities 2) young people and 3) including improving the way government spending on civil society is carried out. She said that these priorities would be viewed through the lens of levelling up communities across the UK and improving digital skills.

DCMS COMMITTEE CALLS FOR ENHANCED SUPPORT FOR CHARITY SECTOR

On 6th May, the parliamentary committee for digital, culture, media and sport reported on the impact of the COVID-19 crisis on the charity sector.

The report backs the charity sector’s call for a stabilisation fund from government and a review of how relief schemes designed for the business sector can be applied across the charity sector. The report also calls for DCMS and the National Lottery Community Fund to publish clear guidance on how charities can access the £750 million offered by HM Treasury to support the charitable sector.

The report highlights that 25% of charities do not have reserves (NCVO) and 70% expect to fail by the end of 2020 (Directory for Social Change). It makes the point that charities do not have the right to survive but that people have the right to the services they provide.

The report acknowledges the role of philanthropy and charitable giving to support the sector in the short term and to help it to rebuild. It highlights measures proposed by the Charities Aid Foundation to incentivise additional giving:
• Remove the declaration requirement so that donations automatically receive Gift Aid until the end of 2021
• Offer one-off tax credits for individuals to be donated to a charity of their choice
• Introduce incentives for industry to roll out payroll giving

The report calls on the government to publish progress on its support package for the charity sector by 5th June.

HOUSE OF LORDS DEBATE ON CHARITABLE SECTOR

On Thursday 30th April, 66 members of the House of Lords spoke in a debate considering the fundraising and organisational challenges faced by the charitable and voluntary sector during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Lord Addington commented on the importance of supporting the sector not only during the crisis, but as we exit it as well. He welcomed the financial input from Government so far but emphasised that the £750 million input covers only 18.7% of the estimated £4 billion loss to the sector, a motion supported by other members.

Baroness Prashar echoed the sentiment that the Government’s response has been inadequate thus far given the scale of problems being faced by charities. She called on the Government to work with funders, regulators and philanthropists to provide leadership and support, as well as actively creating a climate where giving can thrive. She reminded members that philanthropists can act as catalysts to mobilise networks and local communities, but charitable giving cannot fill the £4 billion gap. Therefore, Government must put in place future measures and approaches to help the sector adapt and focus on new ways to meet the funding gap which will be required in the future.

ACF TO HOST ‘FUNDERS COLLABORATIVE HUB’

A proposal is being developed to put in place a collaboration focused on the next phase of the crisis as the country looks to recover and renew. Work is expected to start in summer 2020 and last into 2021.

The Hub will be hosted by ACF and convene foundations and sector partners, led by Esmée Fairbairn Foundation and Lloyds Bank Foundation. The focus of the Hub initially will be sharing information, data and learnings using a “hub and spoke” approach that will connect organisations that are building collaborations on particular issues linked to the pandemic.

The next phase will include engagement with foundations and wider civil society. ACF welcomes contributions. Please contact Carol Mack, Chief Executive, Association of Charitable Foundations (policy@acf.org.uk).

NPC LAUNCHES INTERACTIVE COVID-19 DATA FOR CHARITIES AND FUNDERS

NPC has built an interactive dashboard, to help charities and funders see the places that are currently suffering the most from Covid-19, and those that have underlying factors—such as age, health, ethnicity, economic indicators—which may put them at risk.

NPC wants to expand the range of data available to charities and funders. NPC is exploring including more funder data, plus data on charities, mutual aid groups and social enterprises. NPC also wants to explore demand data from charities, to better understand what they are experiencing on the ground and to set that against official figures.

NPC can only do this with the support of others. If you want to be involved, or you are a funder and you need help to further analyse this data, or you wish to use the data to inform your giving in a particular region or charitable area, please get in touch - tom.collinge@thinknpc.org

GUIDANCE FOR TRUSTEES

With many charitable organisations facing existential challenges, there is an increasing amount of guidance to help trustees navigate the decisions ahead.

The Association of Charitable Foundations identifies that efficient decision making frameworks, understanding of lived experience and diversity of knowledge and personality on boards will be important success factors. ACF states that foundations and charities have to have strong objectives, but also be flexible in balancing long and short term. The report concludes with seven pillars of good foundation governance.

With fears for the wellbeing of charity leaders who are taking on huge responsibilities, Pilotlight reinforced the message that support to charities is more than money, issuing key messages for trustees:

- Focus on mental health for resilience
- Don’t smother
- Focus on good decisions rather than perfect governance

- Know your role and stay informed
- Act immediately, but plan for an exit

On 30th April NCVO held a webinar on Governing during a Pandemic. The main points were:

- Decisions must be in line with charitable objectives
- Severe incident reporting is not suspended: each organisation must evaluate any COVID-19 related risk
- Develop a cash flow forecast, seek advice early and make plans
- Any meetings taken online must be in line with governance documents, decisions must be circulated
- Delegate more authority temporarily to the charity leaders to enable them to be nimble
- Be open to partnerships with non-charitable organisations
- Do scenario planning: develop plans to handle each scenario
- Review and tweak plans regularly

NCVO is also opening guidance on its website to non-members:
https://www.ncvo.org.uk/practical-support/information/governance

The UK Charity Commission has also issued guidance to trustees about financial decision making:

The guidance recommends that charities consider what is in their best interest, leverage trustees’ skills in business and operations to streamline and change business models, go through a process that involves considering their existing financial situation, looking at options for minimising costs and protecting and increasing income, and keeping the charity’s operations and finances under regular review. It also gives legal guidance if a charity has to be closed.

It gives a framework for deciding between meeting urgent need now or dialling down services in order to survive into the future and discusses whether formal structures such as managed insolvency, joint working or merger with another charity could be the most purposeful way forward.

The following information summarises advice from London Funders and New Philanthropy Capital.

ADAPT ACTIVITIES
Grantees may experience difficulties achieving some of the outputs or outcomes originally agreed. Seek to maintain grant payments at originally agreed levels and encourage a conversation if an organisation you are supporting are affected in this way.

DISCUSS DATES
Grantees may struggle to meet reporting deadlines. Encourage them to get in touch to agree more realistic timetables.

FINANCIAL FLEXIBILITY
Grantees may need to use funding to help cover sickness, purchase equipment, or deliver services differently. Consider supporting organisations that need to move money between budget headings to ensure their work can continue.

LISTEN
Grantees may just need to talk about the situation they are facing. Wait until they call you so that these conversations happen at the right time.

BE PROACTIVE
All the usual fundraising channels are severely limited so, if you are a funder, don’t wait to be asked.

BE IMAGINATIVE
Look beyond the media headlines and identify newly vulnerable groups, and work with communities to coordinate with other philanthropists.

CONSIDER WHICH CHARITIES WE CAN’T AFFORD TO LOSE
Ask yourself which charities do brilliant work but you never got around to supporting, take the lead in keeping them going.

ENCOURAGE TRANSPARENCY
Be flexible with grantees, but don’t suspend reporting. Instead work with them to identify new challenges.

BE TIMELY
Bring forward any planned giving. Charities need it now.

RECOGNISE THE RISKS
Facing up to reality, many great charities will not survive through the coming months. Do all you can, but be prepared for the risks.
